

ANTOINE LAVOISIER

(1743-1794)

Antoine-Laurent Lavoisier was born to a wealthy family of the nobility in Paris on 26 August 1743. He is considered as the “The Father of Modern Chemistry”. He made great contributions in chemistry with the discovery of silicon, sulfur, law of conservation of mass and role of oxygen in combustion.